Agent X Code Book Challenge

Agent X Code Book Challenge

A very exciting event is happening somewhere in Buckinghamshire this week.

I AT MADEST POINT

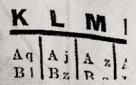

Use the code book to work out what the messages say. They will give you a clue as to what might be happening and where it will take place. Instructions on how to use the code may be found on the right hand side of the code book. Watch out for the HH groups that will tell you how many words to use from each line.

Messages 4 -7 contain words that do not have a code already made up for them so you will have to use the table at the bottom of the code book to decode these words. Watch out for the H L H L (start table) and H M H M (stop table) groups. In WWII agents would have used the table to make up a code for names and locations.

An example is shown below for how to use the table.

Example you might want to put into code the name jon
First small letter j, use j in the first line of the table (though you could use a j anywhere)

Letter L is the letter at the top of the same column Letter A is the letter to the left of j and in the same column

The code for j is LA. This is then repeated as agents in the field would have had crackly radios which were difficult to listen to. So the code for j is LALA

Second letter o

Use o in the third line of the table (use a different line and column than before)

Letter A is the letter at the top of the same column

Letter C is the letter to the left of o and in the same column

The code for o is A C A C

Third letter n
Use n in the fifth line of the table (use a different line and column than before)
Letter W is the letter at the top of the same column
Letter E is the letter to the left of n and in the same column

AS WANDERS POINT

The code for n is WEWE
The code for jon is therefore LALA ACAC WEWE

Message 7 is the competition question. This competition is open to all UK school children aged from 13 to 16. Work out the answer to message 7 and send it – in plain English – along with your full name, age, date of birth, parent/guardian(s) name, telephone number and full address including post code to:

codechallenge@royal.gsx.gov.uk

The sender of the first correct answer to be drawn from all those received by 18th August 2011 will win a prize.

Cabourg

If you are not eligible to enter the competition, you are still welcome to solve the message.

This is a copy of a code book produced by Government Code & Cypher School during WWII for British agents operating behind enemy lines.

It would have been printed onto silk and sewn into the lining of a jacket to avoid detection.
